

I have been an avid listener of XM satellite radio since its debut. I feel this service offers so much more than local radio. I have a better selection of what I, the listener, want to listen to. As well as better coverage. I don't feel you should be using your power to try to restrict this service, but to help it. Whether you like it or not our society, with the upper class complaining about towers popping up in their back yards, is looking to the stars to provide us with the service we desire. The nature of broadcasting anything from a geosync orbit is the entire US gets this service. Satellite radio is offering the same service as CNN, or MSNBC, or FOX News. CNN reports local news and its available to the entire US. If so many stations are concerned of losing their market share, then contact XM about carrying their station. If terrestrial radio was so worried about it why is one of the largest broadcasting companies, Clear Channel, a major backer of XM Radio. That alone shows that who is the NAB trying to protect.
